The International Journal of Bilingual Education and Bilingualism has now consolidated its position as the only outlet for truly international research. It has direct relevance for researchers both within and outside the USA:

- Scholars writing on bilingualism and bilingual education around the world choose the journal to inform and contribute to the international scene
- Scholars writing on the changing nature of bilingual education in the USA choose the journal to reach their colleagues within and outside the USA

Forthcoming special issues include:

- Content and Language Integrated Learning guest edited by Do Coyle & Hugo Baetens Beardsmore
- Economies of Literacy in Multilingual SE Asia guest edited by Christopher Stroud and Lionel Wee
- Multilingualism in post-Soviet countries: language and education policies and practices.

Multilingual Matters has recently made several changes to its online journals website www.multilingual-matters.net.

Most importantly, when you have a paper accepted for publication, it will appear within a short time on our website as an uncorrected proof (via the “Accepted papers” link). Subscribers to the journal can then access the full paper (non-subscribers will only be able to see the list of papers accepted for publication). This can be some time in advance of publication of the issue in which it will appear and means it can start to be cited as “forthcoming”, thereby improving its visibility.

Secondly our free online archive has been extended to include the papers from 2004 and before. This means that all papers published in 2004 and before are freely available to everyone, but the papers since then are only available to subscribers. If you would like to subscribe to take advantage of these benefits, please complete the order form overleaf.

Thirdly, we have improved our email alerts system. Sign up at http://www.multilingual-matters.net/ beb/current.htm to receive a copy of the table of contents every time a new issue is published.

The International Journal of Multilingualism (IJM) fosters, presents and spreads research focused on psycholinguistic, sociolinguistic and educational aspects of multilingual acquisition and multilingualism. The journal is interdisciplinary and seeks to go beyond bilingualism and second language acquisition by developing the understanding of the specific characteristics of acquiring, processing and using more than two languages. The journal has a wide membership circulation as well as a growing subscriber base.

Topics of interest to IJM include, but are not limited to the following:

• early trilingualism;
• multilingual competence;
• foreign language learning within bilingual education;
• multilingual literacy;
• multilingual identity;
• metalinguistic awareness in multilinguals;
• multilingual representations in the mind;
• language use in multilingual communities.
